Project Accomplishments in 2011:

- Hosted the Wild and Scenic Film Festival on tour in Flagstaff, AZ for an audience of nearly 250 people. We also hosted three screenings of the documentary titled: Lords of Nature: Life in a Land of Great Predators at locations across northern Arizona and helped distribute free copies of the DVD and study guide for teachers in area schools.

- Met with Grand Canyon National Park acting superintendent, Jane Lyder, and the newly appointed park superintendent, David Uberuaga, to discuss wolf recovery. We presented an update on the Mexican wolf recovery program and efforts to recover wolves in the Grand Canyon region as part of the spring interpretative ranger training for park rangers at Grand Canyon.

- Assisted wolf proponents in submitting over 100 written comments in support of wolf recovery during a public comment period for the Grand Canyon National Park Backcountry Management Plan.

- Participated with volunteers in a wolf bicycle ride and outreach information table during the Flagstaff Hullabaloo music festival and bike parade.

- Educated 4,500 students and chaperones about the importance of wolves during the Arizona Game and Fish Outdoor Expo Youth Day and other regional outreach events.

- Mentored eight undergraduate interns from Northern Arizona University this year.

- Presented an After School Talk at Lowell Observatory as part of the Flagstaff Festival of Science, and gave a guest lecture for a political science class at Northern Arizona University.

- Hosted a "Wolves in Art" exhibit in downtown Flagstaff during October to celebrate wolves in the Southwest. The show featured the artwork and photographs of six artists and photographers from around the country and abroad.

- Spoke out for wolves and in favor of new releases into the wild at a public meeting held by the Mexican wolf Reintroduction Project field team and the Arizona Game and Fish Department Commission meeting.

Thank you for your support of the Grand Canyon Wolf Recovery Project!
